

2005 La Peira en Damaisela Coteaux du
Languedoc Terrasses du Larzac la Peira

Rating: 93
Drink: -

Mace, mint, black pepper, resin, baked black fruits, and a hint of roasted meat rise from the glass of 2005 Coteaux du Languedoc Terrasses du Larzac La Peira. Saline, stony, chalky, and iodine-like mineral suggestions lend added dimension to the rich, spiced, chocolate-dipped berry fruits, yet as with all of the wines from this estate, a measure of levity and juicy core of fresh fruit acids remains. This doesn't display the floral dimension that makes so many of the other wines at this address especially striking, but it nearly makes up for that in sheer opulence, and will almost surely be worth following for a half dozen more years, during which it may assert itself vis-a-vis the very different Las Flors.

La Peira en Damaisela is the property of London-based composer Robert Dugan, located between Jonquieres and Aniane, on two adjacent parcels of no known previous distinction, but to which in 2004 instinct led him either with remarkable prescience or remarkable luck. The deep alluvial fan that is the basis for this site is only barely tilted, as it might be in St. Helena or Rutherford, St.-Estephe or Pomerol ... and these comparisons will not seem inapt once you experience the quality of La Peira's wines. Claude Gros

- David Schildknecht (June, 2009)

Copyright 2009, The Wine Advocate, Inc. - Reprinted with permission

2005 La Peira en Damaisela Coteaux du
Languedoc Terrasses du Larzac la Peira

Rating: 93
Drink: -

Mace, mint, black pepper, resin, baked black fruits, and a hint of roasted meat rise from the glass of 2005 Coteaux du Languedoc Terrasses du Larzac La Peira. Saline, stony, chalky, and iodine-like mineral suggestions lend added dimension to the rich, spiced, chocolate-dipped berry fruits, yet as with all of the wines from this estate, a measure of levity and juicy core of fresh fruit acids remains. This doesn't display the floral dimension that makes so many of the other wines at this address especially striking, but it nearly makes up for that in sheer opulence, and will almost surely be worth following for a half dozen more years, during which it may assert itself vis-a-vis the very different Las Flors.

La Peira en Damaisela is the property of London-based composer Robert Dugan, located between Jonquieres and Aniane, on two adjacent parcels of no known previous distinction, but to which in 2004 instinct led him either with remarkable prescience or remarkable luck. The deep alluvial fan that is the basis for this site is only barely tilted, as it might be in St. Helena or Rutherford, St.-Estephe or Pomerol ... and these comparisons will not seem inapt once you experience the quality of La Peira's wines. Claude Gros

- David Schildknecht (June, 2009)

Copyright 2009, The Wine Advocate, Inc. - Reprinted with permission